The Chicago P.D. cast is a powerhouse crew and, whether they're chasing down criminals or interrogating suspects, the Intelligence Unit has become an integral part of the One Chicago family.Considering these officers and investigators are at the center of many nail-biting cases, it never gets easier for Chi-Hards to say goodbye to these cherished characters. Whether they leave to accept a job offer elsewhere or meet their untimely demise, Chicago P.D. cast departures are always a bitter pill to swallow.Below, relive some of the most heart-wrenching Chicago P.D. moments that forced Chi-Hards to bid adieu to their faves.Jesse Lee Soffer as Jay HalsteadSeasons 1-10P.D. fans will agree that saying goodbye to Jay Halstead was one of the most tear-jerking farewells in One Chicago history. Jesse Lee Soffer's character spearheaded several intense criminal cases and quickly became a Chicago P.D. fan favorite throughout his 10 seasons on the show.Chi-Hards watched Halstead grow as an investigator, fall in love with and marry Hailey Upton (Tracy Spiridakos), and climb the ranks of the Intelligence Unit. But he shocked Chi-Hards everywhere when he decided to resign from the CPD after killing a perpetrator in self-defense. Halstead subsequently left Chicago to investigate drug cartels in Bolivia — breaking both Upton's heart and those of many P.D. fans.In August 2022, Soffer told Variety his Chicago P.D. exit wasn't a decision he made lightly.“I want to thank the incredible fans for their unwavering support during the past 10 years and want to express my deepest gratitude to Dick Wolf and everyone at Wolf Entertainment, Peter Jankowski, Matt Olmstead, Derek Haas, Michael Brandt, Rick Eid, Gwen Sigan, NBC, Universal Television, my fellow cast mates, and our incredible crew," Soffer explained. "To create this hour drama week after week has been a labor of love by everyone who touches the show. I will always be proud of my time as Det. Jay Halstead."Jon Seda as Antonio DawsonSeasons 1-6Jon Seda was a bona fide One Chicago fan favorite as the fearless Antonio Dawson, the Intelligence Unit's second-in-command, from the series' debut till his departure in Season 6. Dawson was personally appointed by Sgt. Hank Voight (Jason Beghe) looked over the squad whenever he was away. Dawson was the balancing force the squad needed.Besides starring in Chicago P.D. as a member of the original cast, Seda appeared in 7 seasons and 47 episodes of Chicago Fire as the brother of Firehouse 51 paramedic Gabby Dawson (Monica Raymund). Seda made his final P.D. appearance as the Unit's second-in-command in the Season 6 finale after he resigned from the force to address his ongoing drug addiction. Following his P.D. exit in 2019, Seda tweeted, "It’s been an honor portraying Det. Antonio Dawson in the One Chicago world. To my cast family, I’ll always treasure the time and stories we shared. To all you Chi-Hards out there, THANK YOU for being the best of fans! We’ll always have CHICAGO."Elias Koteas as Detective Alvin OlinskySeasons 1-5Detective Al Olinsky, played by the dynamite Elias Koteas, was a beloved member of Chicago P.D.'s Intelligence Unit from Seasons 1-5. Olinksy may have tossed out the rulebook on a few cases, but his dedication made him one of the most captivating One Chicago characters ever. Voight and Olinsky's friendship was forged from their shared experiences, but it was their reckless loyalty to each other that led to Olinksy's demise. Koteas' final appearance as Olinsky arrived after he was framed for a murder he knew Voight had committed.In Season 5, Episode 21 ("Allegiance"), fans were gobsmacked to see Olinsky arrested for a murder Voight committed years ago. Aware of his friend's role in the conspiracy, Olinsky went to jail for the crime, where he was murdered by those who set him up. Fans tearfully bid farewell to Olinksy in Season 5, Episode 22 ("Homecoming"). Voight was devastated.Upon Koteas' departure, many Chi-Hards were curious about how Olinksy's death had come to be, which former showrunner Rick Eid told TV Line was, "from a creative perspective, it was a decision that evolved organically from the ongoing storyline.""“From a business perspective, however, this was an extremely difficult decision. Elias is a terrific actor and a good person," Eid continued. "He’s also been an important part of the show since the very beginning. So this part of the process was really challenging. But Elias handled the news like a true professional and remained committed to the show and his character until the final shot. We will miss him dearly.”Brian Geraghty as Officer Sean RomanSeasons 2-3Actor BRian Geraghty joined the One Chicago cast in the Chicago P.D. Season 2 premiere ("Call It Macaroni") as the Intelligence Unit's newest patrol officer, Sean Roman. Roman quickly partnered up with Kim Burgess (Marina Squerciati), and their workplace partnership bloomed into a flirtatious relationship.After Roman was shot in the line of duty in Season 3, Episode 21 ("Justice"), his condition forced him to decide between desk duty or resigning from the squad. Roman resigned in the Season 3 finale.Geraghty has said he bid farewell to P.D. to pursue other projects. Following the departure, former Chicago P.D. showrunner Matt Olmstead shed some light on Geraghty's exit. “When we wanted to do this Roman character, Dick [Wolf] in particular really wanted Brian Geraghty," Olmstead told TV Line in 2016. "He is the most level-headed, decent human being you’re going to encounter, and he’s upfront. He was like, ‘I don’t know if I can commit to a seven-year contract. This sounds great, but I’ve got to take it year by year.'""“He’s also a producer and wants to get stuff off the ground that he’s been working on and wanted to give us a heads-up and include us in the conversation," Olmstead continued. "It was the most civil, level-headed, mutual fan-fest agreement and departure that I’ve ever been a part of because he was just very decent about it."Archie Kao as Officer Sheldon JinSeason 1 The first devastating Chicago P.D. death to blindside fans was that of Sheldon Jin (Archie Kao). A series like Chicago P.D. demands some shocking developments, but it was no less jaw-dropping when Jin was found murdered in the Season 1 finale after becoming a mole within the Intelligence Unit.Once his seedy superiors became discontent with Jin's lack of intel, they murdered him in cold blood.Former showrunner Olmstead explained that Jin's death was designed to give the Intelligence Unit a wake-up call about the risks of their lifestyles. "It shakes everybody up," Olmstead told TVGuide in 2014. "[Kao] didn't know, nor did we. It's one of those things where the story told was headed in that direction in terms of needing to have a cliffhanger and a big impact of a season finale and also just show the ramifications of that police work and that unit and street level and no one's guaranteed anything. It started to kind of gain momentum; like This character can't survive this." Chicago PD Season 12 left multiple characters at risk of leaving the NBC series following crucial, impactful storylines that affect their future. Chicago PD is one of the long-running series on NBC under the One Chicago banner, and major characters have come and gone throughout its 12-season run. Jesse Lee Soffer's Jay Halstead left the series in Chicago PD Season 10, while other key cast members like Sophia Bush's Detective Erin Lindsay and fan-favorite Al Olinsky (Elias Koteas) left due to career progressions and death, respectively. In Season 12, some characters' futures became unknown due to past mistakes. Chicago PD consists of its core cast led by Jason Beghe as Hank Voight, Patrick Flueger as Adam Ruzek, LaRoyce Hawkins as Kevin Atwater, Marina Squerciati as Kim Burgess, Benjamin Levy Aguilar as Dante Torres, Amy Morton as Trudy Platt, and Season 12 newcomer Toya Turner as Kiana Cook. Is Anyone Leaving Chicago PD In 2025? NBCFollowing a major cliffhanger in the show's penultimate episode, which saw the Intelligence Unit being investigated by Internal Affairs, Chicago PD's Season 12 finale showed the ramifications of Deputy Chief Reid's revenge plot against Voight's team. While the finale resolved the team's issues with Reid, it still left some of the characters' futures hanging in the balance, Benjamin Levy Aguilar - Dante Torres NBCDante Torres (Benjamin Levy Aguilar) had quite an emotional journey in Chicago PD Season 12, mainly due to his intimate relationship with his criminal informant (CI), Gloria Perez, who was later revealed to be an active drug dealer. This secret relationship jeopardized his career, but thankfully, Detective Burgess decided to cover it up to save her teammate. However, Deputy Chief Reid (Shawn Hatosy) became aware of Torres' relationship with his CI, putting him and Burgess in danger. At the end of Season 12's penultimate episode, Torres was arrested for sleeping with his CI. While the Season 12 finale began with Torres behind bars, he was eventually released on bail. Despite that, there is still a good chance that his case may not be over, leading to potential problems sometime in Season 13 that put him at risk of leaving the Intelligence Unit. Amy Morton - Trudy Platt NBCAmy Morton's Trudy Platt has been a mainstay of Chicago PD since the show's premiere in 2014. During the One Chicago 2025 crossover event, Trudy almost died after being shot by one of her former friends. Although she took a while to recover, Trudy returned as a Desk Sergeant in the latter episodes of Chicago PD Season 12. While she may not leave immediately, Trudy may end up setting her sights on retirement in Chicago PD Season 13 and beyond, especially now that her husband, Mouch, was promoted in Chicago Fire's own finale. LaRoyce Hawkins - Kevin Atwater NBC LaRoyce Hawkins' Kevin Atwater is no stranger to exit scares in Chicago PD, especially after he was absent in Season 12, Episode 6 (but it's for a good reason). His journey in the latest season mainly revolved around starting a relationship with forensic psychologist Val Soto and losing one of his childhood friends after it was revealed that he turned into a criminal. After the Intelligence Unit shut down for a bit due to Deputy Chief Reid's revenge scheme against Voight, Atwater was shown in the finale as someone who had lost purpose, with him even declining Val's call in the opening moments. While the fan-favorite character returned to duty at the end of the finale, this shows that losing the Intelligence Unit may be too much for him. At some point in the future, it's possible that there is a long-term storyline for Atwater where he could end up at a crossroads in his career, leading to his potential exit down the line. Still, given Atwater's dedication to the team, it will be a while before he decides to hang it up. Sara Bues - ASA Nina Chapman NBCAssistant State Attorney (ASA) Nina Chapman (Sara Bues) has been a loyal ally of the Intelligence Unit since her debut in Chicago PD Season 9. In Season 12, Chapman's closeness with Voight ultimately transformed into something romantic, and the pair teamed up to try to take down Deputy Chief Reid. However, Voight crossed the line in the finale after pulling strings from behind, leading to Reid being shot down in broad daylight. The final moments between Chapman and Voight suggest that she is not on board with how Voight handled the situation with Reid, causing their relationship to fall apart. In an interview with TV Line, Chicago PD showrunner Gwen Sigan confirmed that Chapman "can't abide" with what Voight did, noting that "it's almost like a breakup" for both of them: "Chapman can’t abide by it. It’s the line he crossed, morally and ethically, that is something that she can’t stand by. That’s where she’s drawing the line. And also, the entire episode, she was basically trying to convince him not to go to this place that he went to, right? Like, she was the angel on his shoulder, basically, pulling him out, and even from that first scene they had together in the teaser, basically telling him, “You cannot shut me out. I’m going to help you,” and he just refuses to let her. And so, by the end of it, she’s realizing that any other hope of anything else is not going to happen. So in my mind, it’s almost like a breakup for Chapman, and it’s this big sad moment for her."The showrunner's comments about Chapman being done with Voight could be a strong hint that she may be leaving the series for good after Season 12. Despite that, there may be a chance for a brief return for Season 13 to tie up loose ends. Is Jason Beghe's Voight Leaving Chicago PD? NBCIn the Chicago PD Season 12 finale, Hank Voight experiences a massive rollercoaster of ups and downs. This is understandable because his Intelligence Unit was shut down in an instant. Voight decided to go underground with his team to try to take down Season 12's big bad, Deputy Chief Reid, but a tragic event happened when their only lead died due to a vehicular crash. As a result, Voight took desperate measures to defeat Reid, and he crossed a line in doing so. It was revealed that Voight pulled strings from behind to pin down Reid, such as manipulating a key witness in exchange for immunity and subtly pushing Otero's teenage son to kill Reid after he told him how his dad died. It is unknown if Voight's actions will come to light in Chicago PD Season 13, but the show has reiterated many times that all of their actions have consequences. Maybe not now, but sometime down the line. This made fans wonder if Voight is at risk of leaving the Intelligence Unit behind in Season 13 and beyond. Speaking in the same interview with TV Line, Chicago PD showrunner Gwen Sigan addressed what's next for Voight following his drastic moves in the finale, suggesting that it might be difficult for him to live with his choices next season: "That’s the question that the audience is left with. It’s the question that Voight is kind of left with. We’ll see. We’ll see where he goes from here. I think he thinks in his head, at this point in time, that what he did was worth what he gained from it and was worth the cost, too. But that’s an easy thing to say in the moment, and then six months later, [he] might not feel the same. So it leaves us with this great continuing question to keep playing with. Like you said, he has this capacity — and it’s not the best capacity — that he can go to these dark places, and he can make these choices, but can he always live with them?"The finale did provide a tease that Voight was having second thoughts about his actions, but he had no power to stop them because they were already in motion. If he ended up coming clean about his actions in the future, the repercussions would be dire, and the worst-case scenario for Voight is for him to leave the Intelligence Unit behind and start fresh. However, Chicago PD has proven time and again that Voight is the lifeblood of the series, and there is a strong chance that he would overcome his demons next season. After seven years, eight seasons, and 140 episodes, Tracy Spiridakos has left Chicago P.D.She's played Detective Hailey Upton since Season 4, but showrunner Gwen Sigan confirmed in January that Spiridakos would be exiting the series following its 13-episode 11th season.The Season 11 finale, titled "More," aired on May 22 and saw Upton pack up her apartment and leave in a cab headed to O'Hare airport. And while fans are left hanging about where the detective went, we do know why: for a fresh start."She's going into this happiness," Spiridakos told NBC Insider. "Which we haven’t gotten to see a lot of with her."RELATED: Inside [Spoiler's] Return to Chicago P.D. After 6 Years: "I Burst Into Tears"But why is the actress leaving the show like a handful of her other fellow One Chicago stars? Find out, below.The reason Tracy Spiridakos left Chicago P.D.Spiridakos officially decided to leave at the end of Season 10, which is when she told Sigan."It was a really hard decision, and I don’t know that there’s ever a right time," the 36-year-old told NBC Insider. "I think I’ve been on the show for just over seven years, like seven and a half-ish years, and I was just wanting to switch it up and kind of see what else was out there. That was really it. I’m so close with everybody. With our producers, Gwen, our writers, our cast, our crew. It was a really difficult and emotional time, for sure."It was a really difficult and emotional time, for sure.”When it came to crafting Upton's final season, Sigan told us, "We wanted to earn the goodbye." "It was all about how can we get into all of those deep little pockets of how she’s feeling and the emotion there," she said. When reflecting on her character's final moments, Spiridakos noted, "We got to see her kind of go through [it] all... At the beginning there’s the absolute fear of what’s gonna happen to Voight. And she lets that fear overtake her; loses her temper, and you know, starts to feel like she’s losing control. But then we get to see her kind of ground, come back down, and focus that attention and that energy with the team and to outsmart Matson... We see at the end it’s this really vulnerable and lovely scene with Voight. And [we] see her go in a happy kind of way, which I really liked." Tracy Spiridakos' co-stars react to her leaving Chicago P.D.While she's looking to what's next in her career, Spiridakos' Chicago P.D. stars are still coming to terms with her exit. When speaking to NBC Insider, LaRoyce Hawkins (Atwater) got emotional reflecting on Spiridakos' final days on set."It's very heartbreaking, to be honest with you," he told us. "She grew into all of our lives as, like, just a favorite. She brings a light to set that you can't really match, you know what I mean? She's just extremely funny, extremely sweet. She's really like a sister."RELATED: A Chicago P.D. We'll see what happens, but hopefully she leaves a little bit of that light with us."Jason Beghe (Voight) echoed Hawkins' sentiments."First of all, she’s somebody who I love and care about and respect," Beghe told NBC Insider. "She will always be part of the shop. Even if she doesn't come back and work with us, she's part of my life and she's part of our show. In the early 1970s he played another upper-class literary character, Lord Peter Wimsey, the amateur but talented investigator created by Dorothy L. Sayers. Carmichael was often typecast as an affable but bumbling upper-class innocent, but he retained a disciplined approach to training and rehearsing.

Built in the Ionic order, it is the best-known structure and symbol of pre-Christian Armenia. It has been described as the "easternmost building of the Greco-Roman world" and the only largely preserved Hellenistic building in the former Soviet Union. It is conventionally identified as a pagan temple built by King Tiridates I in the first century AD as a temple to the sun god Mihr (Mithra). It collapsed in a 1679 earthquake, but much of its fragments remained on the site. Renewed interest in the 19th century led to excavations in the early and mid-20th century. It was reconstructed in 1969–75, using the anastylosis technique. It is one of the main tourist attractions in Armenia and the central shrine of Hetanism (Armenian neopaganism). Development of the Watt steam engine in the late 18th century was an important element in the Industrial Revolution in Europe. The American Revolutionary War took place in the late 18th century. The 18th century lasted from 1 January 1701 (represented by the Roman numerals MDCCI) to 31 December 1800 (MDCCC). During the 18th century, elements of Enlightenment thinking culminated in the Atlantic Revolutions. Revolutions began to challenge the legitimacy of monarchical and aristocratic power structures. The Industrial Revolution began mid-century, leading to radical changes in human society and the environment. The European colonization of the Americas and other parts of the world intensified and associated mass migrations of people grew in size as part of the Age of Sail. During the century, slave trading expanded across the shores of the Atlantic Ocean, while declining in Russia[1] and China.[2] Western historians have occasionally defined the 18th century otherwise for the purposes of their work. For example, the "short" 18th century may be defined as 1715–1789, denoting the period of time between the death of Louis XIV of France and the start of the French Revolution, with an emphasis on directly interconnected events.[3][4] To historians who expand the century to include larger historical movements, the "long" 18th century[5] may run from the Glorious Revolution of 1688 to the Battle of Waterloo in 1815[6] or even later.[7] France was the sole world superpower from 1659, after it defeated Spain, until 1815, when it was defeated by Britain and its coalitions following the Napoleonic Wars. In Europe, philosophers ushered in the Age of Enlightenment. This period coincided with the French Revolution of 1789, and was later compromised by the excesses of the Reign of Terror. At first, many monarchies of Europe embraced Enlightenment ideals, but in the wake of the French Revolution they feared loss of power and formed broad coalitions to oppose the French Republic in the French Revolutionary Wars. Various conflicts throughout the century, including the War of the Spanish Succession and the Seven Years' War, saw Great Britain triumph over its rivals to become the preeminent power in Europe. However, Britain's attempts to exert its authority over the Thirteen Colonies became a catalyst for the American Revolution. The 18th century also marked the end of the Polish–Lithuanian Commonwealth as an independent state. Its semi-democratic government system was not robust enough to prevent partition by the neighboring states of Austria, Prussia, and Russia. In West Asia, Nader Shah led Persia in successful military campaigns. The Ottoman Empire experienced a period of peace, taking no part in European wars from 1740 to 1768. As a result, the empire was not exposed to Europe's military improvements during the Seven Years' War. The Ottoman military consequently lagged behind and suffered several defeats against Russia in the second half of the century. In South Asia, the death of Mughal emperor Aurangzeb was followed by the expansion of the Maratha Confederacy and an increasing level of European influence and control in the region. In 1739, Persian emperor Nader Shah invaded and plundered Delhi, the capital of the Mughal Empire. Later, his general Ahmad Shah Durrani scored another victory against the Marathas, the then dominant power in India, in the Third Battle of Panipat in 1761.[8] By the middle of the century, the British East India Company began to conquer eastern India,[9][8] and by the end of the century, the Anglo-Mysore Wars against Tipu Sultan and his father Hyder Ali, led to Company rule over the south.[10][11] In East Asia, the century was marked by the High Qing era, a period characterized by significant cultural and territorial expansion. This period also experienced relative peace and prosperity, allowing for societal growth, increasing literacy rates, flourishing trade, and consolidating imperial power across the vast Qing dynasty's territories. Conversely, the continual seclusion policy of the Tokugawa shogunate also brought a peaceful era called Pax Tokugawa and experienced a flourishment of the arts as well as scientific knowledge and advancements, which were introduced to Japan through the Dutch port of Nagasaki. The Atlantic slave trade also saw the continued involvement of states such as the Oyo Empire. In Oceania, the European colonization of Australia and New Zealand began during the late half of the century. In the Americas, the United States declared its independence from Great Britain. In 1776, Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence. In 1789, George Washington was inaugurated as the first president. Benjamin Franklin traveled to Europe where he was hailed as an inventor. Examples of his inventions include the lightning rod and bifocal glasses.
